

In Norse mythology, four male red deer eat among the branches of the World Tree, Yggdrasill.

According to the Poetic Edda, the stags crane their necks upward to chomp at the branches. Their names are given as Dáinn, Dvalinn, Duneyrr and Duraprór.

